GLENDALE, Ariz. — Last week it was revealed the San Francisco 49ers held a private workout for elite cornerback D.J. Moore. What they didn't reveal was it was in Tempe, Arizona, with the local high school team. Moore was one of the few players on the field for a workout, and although the workout was a one-time deal, there's no telling where it will lead. The 21-year-old has the size, speed and talent to be a great corner, but the early returns have been mixed. Moore has had a rough summer, after a much better rookie year in 2015. The 49ers will likely need a cornerback next season, and at this point Moore is still in the conversation. The invite was first reported by McCarthy's 49ers.com, and later reported by NFL.com.
